We all know that climate change and strained resources will continue to affect how we live. But, what can we do to ensure that the future of Chicago and the surrounding suburbs won't face great threat because of these factors? Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning is looking ahead to how the region could look in 2050, and offering five Alternative Futures. CMAP has been collecting feedback from residents since April. We talk to Elizabeth Schuh from CMAP about what they learned from those public forums.
